SPEAKER'S REMARKS

Ladies and gentlemen of the House, I appreciate the honor you have bestowed on me once again, being elected speaker of the House is a humbling experience, and I pledge to you that I will do everything I can to be the best speaker I can possibly be.

I would first like to welcome all of our freshmen House members who are here with us officially for the first time. There are some 17 of you, not the largest freshmen class I've seen, but certainly not the smallest. I've had the opportunity to meet most of you personally and to learn what your goals are for the time that we will be spending in the Tennessee House. The freshness and enthusiasm you bring to this process is like a "shot in the arm" to those of us who've been around a few years. It's just like any other age-old process, it needs a transfusion occasionally to keep it healthy and up and running.

I want to pledge to you who are new, my support, and that of all the House leadership--both Republican and Democrat. We know what you're about to go through. In fact, some of our House leaders remember very well because they were freshmen themselves just two years ago. You see, you don't have to wait till you're old and balding before you get the attention of your colleagues.

If I had three suggestions for you freshmen today, they would be first to listen well--because with all the noise up here, you'll have to be smart enough to learn what to listen for.

Second, to work smart--because likely more than 1,500 bills will be filed this year, being a good legislator will require more than just working hard.

And the third, and most important thing, is to act responsibly.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 12, 1993 -- FIRST ORGANIZATIONAL DAY

sometimes that's a hard one to figure out. You have to not only find out what your constituents want, but you have to find out what's best for the state as a whole, and then you have to figure out what can be passed. It's not always easy, and very seldom does anybody get a whole loaf, but that's how the process works. It's a dash of idealism, a pinch of reality, and a whole lot of compromise.

And acting responsibly for the people of the state of Tennessee will take more than a dash of reality this session. We've got some tough issues again. And they're made tougher because they're not new issues, they've been around for awhile, and it's time we got serious about them.

You all know we passed a new education reform bill last year. Providing a quality education for every child in Tennessee is a major concern, and you know we began funding that bill through a half-cent sales tax--a temporary half-cent tax. That means you and I have to make a very tough decision--you and I either have to continue that half cent or let our constituents know they have basically two options--cut out the improvements made this school year or pass a local property tax increase. It's a tough decision.

Second issue--medicaid. I'll be honest with you, I don't know what to do about this one--and what's worse I don't know anyone who does. We've got a medicaid program that now takes a larger chunk out of our budget than the education of our children. But it's not just numbers, there's a people side of it too. One out of every five Tennesseans is on medicaid already. So we have to understand that we're not just talking dollars, we're affecting people. As we work here at the state level through our various legislative committees, and the new administration in Washington for some signs of relief--or at least for some direction to the states in the area of health care reform.

Third issue--ethics. Two years ago, when I was elected speaker, I set out for this body three objectives I had for improving our campaign laws. We accomplished two of those. We tightened our conflict of interest disclosure statute and we prohibited the personal use of campaign funds. We now need to work on the third objective--limiting campaign contributions.

As all of us know from having just run a race, campaign spending has gotten out of hand. It's time we asked ourselves some serious questions about this. These are not things we like to talk about. But they're things the public talks about--so it behooves us to do something about them.

There'll be other issues this year--but these are some of the main ones. These are going to be the political "hot potatoes." We've got a lot in store for us. We all must listen well, work smart, and act responsibly.

I want to remind you of one more thing. Two years ago, in this very spot, I noted the "cloud" of public suspicion that hung over this body. I said we had the responsibility to regain the public's trust and that it should be our first order of business. I don't want to linger on this, but I do want to say that I think the way the members of this House have conducted themselves the past two years, goes a long way in dissipating that cloud.

Thank you again for electing me for your speaker. I ask your help during the coming year.

CHAIR TO SPEAKER

Mr. Speaker Naifeh resumed the Chair.

OATH OF OFFICE

The Oath of Office was administered to Speaker Pro Tem DeBerry by the Honorable Lyle Reid, Chief Justice of the Tennessee Supreme Court, as prescribed by the State Constitution and the Statutes of Tennessee.

Speaker Pro Tem DeBerry expressed her appreciation with the following remarks.

SPEAKER PRO TEM'S REMARKS

Thanks, Mr. Speaker, members of the House. Let me first thank you for this honor. You have given me this opportunity once again. But let me say to all of you -- freshmen and veterans. That this is the beginning of a new day. We can waste it or we can use it for good; we can do good and not evil. We can be a success and not a failure. Because we all chose to be here. We all decided that we wanted to run for public office. There will be times we will want to throw our hands up and we want to quit.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 12, 1993 -- FIRST ORGANIZATIONAL DAY

But I am reminded when Governor McWherter was Speaker of the House, and he got tired, and he got weak, he would often remind us that if you didn't want to work you shouldn't have hired out. So I say to you that we have a tough session; we're going to have a long session; we're going to have a tiring session.

And to all our friends, our families, who are gathered here today, we say to you that we not only need you today, but we need you throughout this trying session. We need you to be there to support us; to be there to give us comfort, to talk to us, to show that we can come back every week and work for the benefit and in the best interest of all the people of Tennessee.

So I say to all of you that this IS the beginning of this new day. And I want to again thank you for giving me the opportunity to serve as your Speaker Pro Tem and I'm going to do my very best to be the very BEST Speaker Pro Tem that Tennessee has ever had, and the best in this country.

I say to you that let's all hang in there; let us all work together and at the end of this General Assembly, then we can all say, individually and collectively, that we HAVE made a difference in the lives of the people of Tennessee.

Thank you.
